

“Health and well-being in all policies: Thailand experience”

Monday 21st to Friday 25th November 2022

Background

The World Health Organization (WHO) defines health as ‘Health is a state of complete physical, mental and social well-being and not merely the absence of disease or infirmity.’ In other words, the WHO definition links health explicitly with wellbeing, and conceptualizes health as a human right requiring physical and social resources to achieve and maintain. ‘Wellbeing’ refers to a positive rather than neutral state, framing health as a positive aspiration.

The social determinants of health (SDH) are the non-medical factors that influence health outcomes. They are the conditions in which people are born, grow, work, live, and age, and the wider set of forces and systems shaping the conditions of daily life. Classically defined behavioral and environmental risk factors (e.g. tobacco use, alcohol use, unhealthy diet, unsafe sexual behavior) are strongly influenced by complex existing and emerging factors in society, which present challenges to health and well-being in countries and globally.

Health in all policy (HiAP) is one coordination approach that influence health consider and equity impact to public policies across sector to avoid harm and improve the health for all populations. This approach will enhance health equity and well-being to all communities and all people as well. HiAP also recognizes that population health is not merely a product of health sector programmes but largely determined by policies that guide actions beyond the health sector. Policy in every sector of government can potentially affect health and inequities in health. Using a HiAP approach aims to address policies such as those influencing transport, housing and urban planning, the environment, education, agriculture, finance, taxation and economic development so that they promote overall health and health equity.

To Promote Health in All Policies by countries implementation HiAP and intersectoral action, WHO support countries and stakeholders to focus the social determinants of health by engaging in various action involving capacity building with training resources. In addition, giving advice to their network in terms of HiAP. In country level, to support policy makers, leaders, and health provider to develop action and coherence in policies relevant. Lastly, cooperation with partnership to train and link with other governance to improve intersectoral planning for health in all policy.

And since 2018, the Global Network for Health in All Policies (GNHiAP) was introduced by the governments of Sudan, Finland, NHCO Thailand, the Province of Québec, and the State of South Australia at the World Health Assembly (WHA71) side event to advocate country led initiative on HiAP. The network has an ultimate goal to work with different stakeholders from different sectors at all levels to address social determinants of health by strengthen the HiAP approach and to support the implementation of SDGs and UHC by building capacity, sharing knowledge, promoting community practice and supporting evidence to inform policy.:Source [NHCO Thailand: https://en.nationalhealth.or.th/the-global-network-for-health-in-all-policies-gnhiap/]

The covid-19 pandemic affects health in all countries with its impact on health, social, economy. Multi-sectoral collaboration between health and non-health sector is required to enhance health benefit and implementation the health policy in order to provide health equity and accessibility linkage with well-being in all countries.

To create experience sharing platform, Thai UHC Alliance partners compose of the Ministry of Public Health (MOPH), National Health Security Office (NHSO), Thai Health Promotion Foundation (ThaiHealth) and National Health Commission Office, Thailand (NHCO) in cooperation with the International Health Policy Program (IHPP) and the Enhancing Leadership on Global Health-Thailand under the WHO Country Cooperation Strategy (CCS-EnLIGHT) will organize an onsite workshop to share experience of Thai Universal Health Coverage and HiAP experiences which supports Thailand health system under theme “Health and well-being in all policies: Thailand experience”. The workshop aims at building capacity of countries with high political commitment to understand more Thailand’s experience and apply the knowledge to real actions based on their context.

In addition, this workshop is the second workshop about Thailand experience on UHC and health system. In 2021, Thailand organized Thai UHC Journey workshop: How Thailand Achieved Good Health at Low Cost? with aimed to building capacity of countries with high political commitment to achieving UHC and to share Thailand's experience to real actions based on their context. Ultimately, the workshop also promotes South-South technical collaborations.
